The Palm Court with its light and airy sun lounge and terrace is often referred to as 'a temple of art deco'.

The defining feature of The Palm Court lounge is the stained-glass dome on the ceiling - A mesmerizing kaleidoscope of blues, greens and turquoise. It was commissioned in 1929 by Archie Nettlefold. It was under the up-and-coming architect Matthew Dawson that Jane Wailes, one of his proteges, created detailed drawings of the decadent Peacock dome that continues to adorn the ceiling of this beautiful space today.

The Palm Court lounge invites guests with its calm ambience and an upliftingly bright sun lounge. It is the perfect spot to relax whilst listening to gentle music from the era or indulging in a light bite and a refreshing beverage. It is so easy to drift off back to a bygone era and imagine some of our iconic historical guests of the past, including Agatha Christie and Noel Coward, doing just the same.
